License to Sell Real Estate.

CORNELIUS V. CLIFFORD'S ESTATE.

STATE OF VERMONT, Caledonia District, ss. In Probate Court, held at St. Johnsbury, within and for said District, on the 25th day of November, A. D. 1903. Adna S. Clifford, guardian of Cornelius V. Clifford, a legally incapable person, of Danville, in said District, makes application to said Court for license to sell the following described real estate of said ward, to wit: Being the premises described in a warranty deed of Cornelius V. Clifford to James O'Brien, dated November 14th, A. D. 1899 and recorded in Book 18, Page 267 of Hardwick land records, and being the same premises recovered to the said Cornelius V. Clifford by the said James O'Brien, November 16, A. D. 1903. Said premises situate in Hardwick, Vt., representing that the sale thereof, for the purpose of putting the proceeds of such sale at interest or investing the same in stocks or real estate, would be conducive to the interest of said ward.

Whereupon, it is ordered by said Court that said application be referred to a session thereof to be held at the Probate Office, in said St. Johnsbury, on the 19th day of December, A. D. 1903, for hearing and decision thereon; and it is further ordered, that publication of notice of said application and of the last session of said Court, be made by the guardian of said ward, three weeks successively in the Caledonian, printed at St. Johnsbury, before said time of hearing, that they may appear at said time and place, and if they see cause, object thereto.

By the Court, Attest: WALTER P. SMITH, Judge.

COLONEL MONROE'S DOCTRINE

The Lincolnville Philosopher Discusses the Popular Election of United States Senators

By FREDERICK UPHAM ADAMS

Copyright, 1903, by Frederick Upham Adams

"THIS is old fashioned winter weather," said Colonel Monroe, as he entered the cozy back room of the Lincolnville post office. The swirl of snowflakes which hurried through the door melted in the heat from a glowing stove. The colonel stamped his feet, shook the snow from his broad brimmed hat and fur lined overcoat and greeted Judge Sawyer and Postmaster Jenkins.

"How are you, Judge?" he exclaimed, shaking hands with Lincolnville's banker and most substantial citizen. "Keep your seat, Judge. Glad to see you. Hello, Jenkins. How's the postmaster? Your customers will get scant mail tonight. The station agent says the road is blocked both directions. No. 62 is stalled in Redacre's cut, the other side of Ridgeway, and the Eastern Limited is fast in a snowdrift somewhere between Wayne and Kirkwood. So you may as well take it easy. What's the news, Jenkins?"

Postmaster Jenkins thought a moment, and a frown lowered the edges of his thin eyebrows.

"I hear they're going to fire Russell, the new Methodist preacher," he said, shaking down the coals and raking back the embers. "Did you hear about the sermon he preached last Sunday? He attacked corporations, trusts and rich people in general, and said this country was getting in shape for a revolution like the one they had in France. That's fine talk for a preacher, stirring up the masses against property rights. Deacon Snow told me they thought they'd let him go. The deacon says he's an anarchist, or something."

"I heard the sermon," said Colonel Monroe, lighting a long black cigar and leaning back in his favorite chair. "You were there, too, Judge Sawyer. I don't see why Deacon Snow should get excited. All he has is 100 acres of land, $2,000 in your bank and rheumatism in his right leg. Parson Russell's revolutionists will never burn his chateau. I didn't think much of the sermon myself, but it will not stir our Lincolnville people to bloody revolt. This is not Paris, we're not French, and we have none of the conditions which brought about the revolution of 1789. But why muzzle Preacher Russell? He's honest in his opinions. He will arouse interest and stimulate study and discussion of our new problems. It's never safe to gag a parson."

"There's too much talk now," declared Postmaster Jenkins. "We'd better let well enough alone. If it wasn't for the trusts and corporations what would this country amount to? It wouldn't amount to nothing. Preacher Russell had better stick to his Bible."

"I wonder what would happen to our new minister if he took your advice," mused Colonel Monroe, with a side glance at Judge Sawyer. "Suppose the Reverend Russell preached his sermons from such texts as 'Sell all that thou hast and distribute to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven.' There are a thousand texts like that in the Bible."

"But the Bible doesn't really mean that," interrupted the postmaster eagerly. "Mr. Rockefeller has changed the verse so that it reads, 'Sell all that thou hast that stands between thee and Christ and distribute to the poor.' That's what it really means."

"I hesitate to abandon the good old St. James version and take up the Standard Oil edition of the good book," remarked Colonel Monroe. "A stock exchange revision would carry more weight with me. No, Jenkins; the Bible means just what it says or it means nothing. I've as much right to insert my personal creed between the holy lines as has Mr. Rockefeller or any capitalist or preacher. But we'll not discuss the Bible. Do you know why Deacon Snow is so violent in this matter? Well, I'll tell you. I kept my eye on the deacon and others while the preacher was expounding his views on wealth. And they kept their eyes on our banker friend here, Judge Sawyer. That's a fact, Judge. And I know just what they were thinking. You're the richest member of the church, and they thought the preacher was hitting at you. And if you say the word out goes Preacher Russell. I'll wager that you took not the slightest personal offense at the preacher's remarks."

"I thought it an interesting sermon," said Judge Sawyer, with a grave smile. "Mr. Russell is a young man and a little inclined to be impulsive perhaps, but he is earnest and honest. I have already assured him of my support, but I think, colonel, that you exaggerate my influence. However, it is safe to predict that Mr. Russell will not be forced from his position. Neither will he be asked to modify his pulpit utterances to suit Deacon Snow or any one else."

"The people of Lincolnville, and for that matter every other community," remarked Colonel Monroe, "are divided into two classes. One holds for banks and bankers a reverence which takes the form of abject fear, the other believes that all bankers are in a conspiracy to corral the wealth of the nation and incidentally to suppress all discussion of their methods. This latter class has conjured up a monster called 'the money power,' an argus eyed dragon whose Dionysian ears catch every whisper of protest and whose clutch means financial death. This fabled creature has inspired a public cowardice and a servility which are astounding. The ancients had an unpropitious god so sacred and dreaded that to mention his name meant death. We have preachers, statesmen and even editors who have grown so timid that they dare not write 'bank' or 'railroad' without mentally crossing themselves."

"There is truth in what you say," admitted Judge Sawyer. "As a plain old fashioned Democrat I do not like to be the object of this unbecoming servility. A banker is nothing more or less than a money merchant, and should wield no more power nor be accorded a higher standing than any other business man. If there be a money or trust conspiracy your average banker, be he of the city or of the country, is no part of it. If the trust system be a plot rather than an economic development the small banker should be the first to protest. If the great city banks succeed, as they probably will, in passing a law authorizing branch banks they will force every country bank into liquidation."

"There is no reason why the small bank should not go the way of all small undertakings," said Colonel Monroe. "The small railroads, the small factories and the small markets have been merged into huge corporations called trusts. Why should the small banks escape? We are witnesses to a stupendous industrial and financial revolution, and the unthinking ones cry conspiracy, while cowards dread to contemplate, much less discuss, a perfectly natural phenomenon. There is a popular belief that a score or more of years ago a number of inspired men originated a plot which has brought about the existing combinations. They accord to the men who are at the head of these vast organizations credit for a sagacity which is more than human. They proclaim these men kings and bow before them in fear and trembling. They worship before an imaginary throne. These new gods are more astounded than their subjects. J. Pierpont Morgan did not create trusts; the trusts created J. Pierpont Morgan. Andrew Carnegie did not develop the steel industry; the steel industry developed Mr. Carnegie. John D. Rockefeller is not responsible for the Standard Oil company; it is responsible for Mr. Rockefeller. Armour did not discover the meat business; the meat business discovered Mr. Armour. These men were at hand, and destiny seized and swept them into power. Columbus did not create a new world. I fear I am becoming figurative, Judge."

"J. Pierpont Morgan is a great man," said Postmaster Jenkins, who had vainly attempted to follow the argument. "I saw him once when he went through Lincolnville in his private car. He threw a cigar only half smoked up out of the car window, and I picked it up and have it up to my nose."

"What I was about to say is this," continued Colonel Monroe, ignoring the postmaster's reminiscence. "There is a disposition to suppress—I should say to discourage—a free and open discussion of the trust question and the various issues pertaining to it. Why is this? What is there to be concealed? There is no revolution pending; the revolution has occurred. We are installing a new system of industry. The edifices of old institutions are tumbling on every hand, and the foundations of new and grander ones are being laid amid the ruins. We are to live in them and among them. Shall we not have a look at the architect's plans and the builder's specifications? Are the details finished from cornerstone to flagstaff? Not a bit of it. Who is to be benefited by a conspiracy of silence? Surely not those who have gained the greater advantage from the changes thus far made. They are too broad minded to imagine for a moment that they are to reap the exclusive benefit. I claim to have the average amount of intelligence and am an interested party, but I declare, Judge Sawyer, that I haven't received enough light on these great questions to qualify myself as a fair juror. There are two sides to all questions, but this one has a dozen. It is of vastly more importance than the slavery issue or the preservation of the Union. It involves the preservation of society. Instead of avoiding debate the great financial interests should stimulate it. There is real menace in a prejudice inspired by ignorance. Let all sides be heard. Any interest which resorts to evasion or hides the presentation of all the testimony endangers its chance for exact justice."

"I fear that some interests do not wish exact justice," observed Judge Sawyer as he arose to go.

"I remember now," said Postmaster Jenkins as he helped the colonel with his overcoat, "that Mr. Morgan had on a red smoking jacket and a black skullcap."

A SIMPLE REMEDY FOR CATARRH

Just Breathe Hyomei Four Times a Day and be Cured.

If a few years ago someone had said you can cure catarrh by breathing air charged with a healing balsam, the idea would have been ridiculed and it remained for that eminent investigator, R. T. Booth, to discover in Hyomei this method of cure.

Hyomei has performed almost miraculous cures of catarrh and is today recognized by leading members of the medical profession as the only advertised remedy that can be relied upon to do just what it claims. The complete outfit of Hyomei costs but $1.00 and consists of an inhaler, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei.

Breathe Hyomei through the inhaler for a few minutes four times a day and it will cure the worst case of catarrh. It soothes and heals the mucous membrane of the air passages, prevents irritation, and effects a complete and lasting cure.

In St. Johnsbury there are scores of well known people who say they have been cured of catarrh by Hyomei. If it does not cure you, W. B. Eastman will return the money you paid for Hyomei. This is the strongest evidence that can be offered as to his faith in the remedy.

A complete outfit costs but $1.00, and includes an inhaler, dropper and sufficient Hyomei for several weeks treatment. Perhaps the strongest evidence that can be given to doubters, is the fact that W. B. Eastman has so much faith in Hyomei that he sells every package under a positive guarantee to refund the money if it does not cure.

Now is the time to begin the use of Hyomei.

Catarrh Cured Without Drugs.

Hyomei Medicates the Air You Breathe, Kills the germs and Cures the Disease.

Hyomei cures catarrh thoroughly and permanently, because it reaches the smallest air cells in the head, throat and lungs, kills the germs causing the disease and drives it from the system. Hyomei goes to the root of the disease, destroys the cause, and makes permanent cures which can be effected in no other way. Breathe it for a few minutes four times a day and benefit will be seen at once. Continue this treatment for a few weeks and Hyomei will have cured you.

The Hyomei breathed through the neat pocket inhaler furnished with each outfit mingles with the air you breathe. It is a local and direct treatment for eradicating all catarrh germs in the mucous membrane and tissues and in this way cures catarrh in any part of the system. Used in connection with Hyomei Balm it has been successful in curing the worst and most deep-seated cases of catarrhal deafness.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs $1.00 and comprises an inhaler, a bottle of Hyomei and a dropper. The inhaler will last a lifetime; and additional bottles of Hyomei can be obtained for 50c.

Stronger than any claims that can be made in an advertisement, is the fact that W. B. Eastman will give his personal guarantee with every Hyomei outfit he sells to refund the money if the purchaser can say that Hyomei has not cured him.

Old and New Way.

Hyomei the Latest Scientific Discovery for the Cure of Catarrh.

The discovery of Hyomei has wrought a wonderful change in the treatment of catarrh.

Prior to three years ago the medicines ordinarily employed in the cure of this disease were nauseating drugs and worthless tonics. In some instances they benefited, but the improvement was not lasting.

With Hyomei you take into the air passages of the throat and head a balsamic air that goes to the minutest cells, effectively killing all germs and microbes of catarrh. It enters the blood with the oxygen, killing the germs in the blood, and restores health to the whole system. Many astonishing testimonials have been received from those who have been cured by Hyomei.
